What if you could get paid NOW for the insurance patients you treated last week?

A practice that relies on insurance payments for much of its profit and continued operation can often run into cash-flow problems. How? In the all-too-familiar and often-painful no-man's-land between the insurance billing and the collection.

What might your practice be able to accomplish if you could close that gap and collect that money now?

That's where factoring comes in.

Immediate Cash Flow

Instead of waiting two months – or longer – for funds owed you, you can have that cash within 24 hours. Utilize that cash for equipment, facilities, marketing, or any other item on the endless list seemingly needed to support a growing practice. With factoring, a funding agency – called a factor – purchases your accounts receivables. You get paid immediately, based on their value, and the factor is then responsible for collection from your patients' insurers.

Stress-Free Funding – NOT a Loan

Unlike a bank loan, for which you would be indebted and would pay high interest, factoring is a low-stress low-fee solution which creates no debt. It is the funding of your business based on an asset you already have – your own accounts receivables.

Factoring also eliminates other disadvantages of loans, such as surrender of collateral or equity, long times-to-approval and times-to-fund, and complex applications. Terms can be extremely flexible. Fees are much lower. And qualifying is much easier – even if your credit is poor, you are under a lien, or have recently filed bankruptcy.

Although in many instances you can obtain a bank loan for an anticipated cash flow deficiency, you generally cannot return to the bank each month to request an increase. But unlike a bank, factoring is like a line of credit that grows along with your practice.

Legitimate, Reputable Firms

Factoring has long been recognized as a legitimate form of funding. The funding firms are reliable and reputable, with stable, verifiable histories.

Find the Right Factor – Obtain Funding Quickly

Fortunately, you don't need to perform the considerable research to find the right factor for your practice. Professional Funding Services represents a wide variety of factors, and will match you, with your unique needs, to the factor who will best benefit you and your situation. Simply give us a call.

No commission will be charged to you. Commissions are paid by the funding agencies.

Additionally, we will make your funding even more stress-free by assisting you in completing your application to speed the approval process, and will continue to work closely with your potential factor to ensure your funding is rapidly approved.
