

What Our Customers Say:

“Repipe Specialists’ work was excellent. The crew took the time to cover our furniture and protect our wood floors with care. They cleaned up, and took care of the minor follow up that was required. The quality of the drywalling, patching, stucco repair on the inside and outside of the home, the installation of the water heater, etc. were done with care – quickly and efficiently. The price for the work was comparable to other quotations I received, but the speed at which the work was completed was better than what was offered by others (on average, double the time). Considering my home is a two-story, and that repiping is very invasive, the speed at which the work was performed was welcomed! Many thanks to your team for a job well done!”

“We live in an old, two-story Victorian home. Because of your estimating consultant’s friendly, informative and thorough presentation we decided to use your company for our repipe needs. The crew did a fantastic job, working in an organized, timely manner and was very courteous. They cleaned up in the work areas immediately after the work was done. It is sooooo wonderful to have full water pressure again throughout our house. Thanks so much and we will recommend your company to anyone else that needs repipe work.” —D.T., Pasadena, California

The Problem with Galvanized Plumbing

When galvanized plumbing gets old, built-up corrosion drastically reduces water pressure, or rusts the pipes causing impure and discolored water, and eats through the pipes, causing leaks.

These leaks can cause severe property damage as well as mold, a dangerous health risk. Because of potential damage, home insurance rates can be higher for homes with galvanized plumbing, and some companies won't insure unless the galvanized plumbing is replaced with copper.

Copper Repiping Prevents All of These Problems

Copper does not corrode, and will last the life of your house – in fact we give it a lifetime guarantee. Once installed, copper piping will

- Greatly increase water pressure
- End the problem of leaks
- End the danger of property damage and leak-caused mold
- Dramatically increase water clarity and purity

It will also increase your property value and could reduce your insurance rates. From an economic standpoint, you simply cannot go wrong by repiping now.

Why Repipe Specialists?

The Experts. Since 1991, we at Repipe Specialists have had copper repiping as our sole line of business. We are the experts. For that reason, our pricing is usually about half that of a regular plumbing contractor.

Addressing Your Needs.

Our estimators fully evaluate your particular situation, and make sure you completely understand the procedure before it starts, placing your peace-of-mind and understanding above “sales pressure.”

Protecting Your Home.

We cover floors and furniture to protect your home and belongings. Most jobs are completed within one day, but if the job must take longer, we clean up and make sure you have hot water before leaving each day. At the end of the job, we patch all holes and fully clean up so it's like we were never there.
